An simple, great and useful macro maker, keymacro allows you to record any combination of keyboard and mouse actions, and then re-record them for future use. In addition, you can record the keystroke while the application is in the background, and even record the hotkeys assigned to the application's windows. Keymacro comes equipped with a standard set of features for recording keystrokes and mouse clicks, as well as some more advanced options for creating macros. Recording Keystrokes and Mouse Clicks The 'Basic Mode' is the most basic of all the options available, as it offers the ability to record up to 15 different keystrokes and mouse clicks at the same time. In order to record the keystrokes, you simply select the option of 'Key Record', and then select which keys and mouse buttons to record. You can also select the option of 'Repeat Click' to enable the application to record your mouse clicks. If you want to record more than 15 different keystrokes, you can simply select the option of 'Shift' to enable additional keystrokes. As for the recording duration, there are 2 options available, as well as the option of either saving the recorded keystrokes as a standard text file, or a macro file (.km) for future use. In the first instance, you can record keystrokes for up to 60 seconds, while the latter option can record keystrokes for unlimited duration. In order to play back the recorded keystrokes and mouse clicks, you need to select the option of 'Playback' from the Recording menu, and then select the file type to be played back from the list that appears. Advanced Features In addition to the basic mode, Keymacro offers some of its users an additional level of customization, as it enables users to select any application from the list of supported programs, as well as to associate hotkeys with the application's windows. For example, you can easily select any application, such as Internet Explorer, Word, or any other supported program, and then assign hotkeys to various system functions, as well as to switch to or from each of the application's windows. In order to enable this, you need to select the option of 'Assign Macro Keys' from the Recording menu. After that, you need to specify which application and window you want to assign the hotkeys to. 2edc1e01e8

(They made a lot of changes to the Windows 10 version. You have to re-download the app. The old version I have been using is under the Windows 7 version. I cannot find it in the Windows 10 version.) - The main area of the window is too small for a 50x50 px wallpaper.
